

Are you a candidate for clinical research trials?

Patient participation in Clinical Research Trials is crucial to finding more effective and safer methods of prevention, treatment and management of gastroenterology diseases. The importance of patient participation in clinical trials helps promising new drugs move from the research and testing phase to becoming commercially available.

There is no cost to patients participating in clinical trials for medication, physical exams or lab tests. In some cases, the patient may receive compensation for their participation. Participation in a Clinical Trial is crucial to moving forward in our technology and bringing hope to the future for new therapies.

We are actively conducting the following research trials in the areas of:

Ulcerative Colitis Research Study
Crohn's Research Study

If you suffer from any of these conditions, or know someone who does and are interested in learning more about these exciting trials, please call our office at 480.219.6662 or visit gastrotrials.com where you will be directed to take a brief prescreening survey to determine eligibility.
